Should

Should is a modal verb. Like almost all modal verbs they are irregular, and they are used to modify the verb that follows. Modal verbs:

- Do not use the auxiliary verb do for questions and negatives
- lack the infinitive form
- lack the past participle form

Should is used to give advice or to express good manners:

Affirmative:	You should send the email as soon as possible
Interrogative:	Where should we go?
Negative:	You shouldn't arrive late
Short answers:	Yes, I should.      / No, I shouldn't

Must/Mustn't/Can/ Should

Must is used to express obligation:

I must call my client

Mustn't is used to express prohibition:

You mustn't smoke in all the facilities

Can is used to express:

Ability:	I can play the piano
Possibility	I can't go out tonight
Permission:	Can I make a phone call?

Should is used to give advice:

They should hurry up if they want to get to the meeting on time

Object pronouns

Unlike subject pronouns, object pronouns are a complement and go after the verb
